The company that brought you milk chocolate, Maggi instant noodles and Rocky Road ice cream is worried about your health.

Nestle SA, the world's largest food company, has joined the trend for personalized nutrition with a blend of artificial intelligence, DNA testing and the modern obsession with Instagramming food. The program, begun in aging Japan, could provide the Swiss company with a wealth of data about customers' wellness and diet as it pivots toward consumers who are seeking to improve their health and longevity.

In Japan, some 100,000 users of the "Nestle Wellness Ambassador" program send pictures of their food via the popular Line app that then recommends lifestyle changes and specially formulated supplements. The program can cost $600 a year for capsules that make nutrient-rich teas, smoothies and other products such as vitamin-fortified snacks. A home kit to provide samples for blood and DNA testing helps identify susceptibility to common ailments like high cholesterol or diabetes.

As is becoming standard practice in the aftermath of such incidents, the company also announced that it would offer one free year of identity monitoring to the people impacted by the breach.

This latest announcement serves to drive home one of the main points made in a recently conducted survey, "The Global State of Information Security Survey 2018," which concluded that insider threats are one of business' top security concerns.

This breach is significantly smaller in both scope and scale than some of the others we've seen so far this year. However, the company is still suffering backlash, which has impacted both the trust of its employees and the company's stock price. As of now, the company's stock price is down nearly 4 percent over the last three months, with additional losses likely in the near term.

Data Breaches Hit the Board Room: How to Address Claims Against Directors and Officers

The rise of shareholder suits filed against directors and officers

Last year, four shareholder derivative lawsuits were filed in the District of Minnesota against the directors and officers of Target following a large data breach at the company in November 2013. These lawsuits named 13 of Target's directors and officers as defendants and asserted claims for breach of fiduciary duty and waste of corporate assets, among others. The shareholders challenge not only the directors' and officers' conduct before the data breach, alleging their misconduct allowed the data breach to happen, but also challenge their conduct following discovery of the data breach, asserting the directors and officers acted improperly in the way they disclosed, investigated, and remediated the data breach. The cases have been consolidated and remain pending.

Equifax executives failed to ensure the safety of its main product, personal data, and left half the American public susceptible to identity theft.[11] The company had the resources to easily patch the website vulnerability and prevent the breach. At worst, its behavior is, as described by Senator Chuck Schumer, “malfeasance,” or at best, negligence.[12]

It is well established that directors owe the corporation and its shareholders a duty of care, which includes a duty of oversight.[13] Directors must provide adequate reporting systems that will provide the board with information necessary to make informed decisions.[14] Even with such a system, directors breached their duty when they “consciously failed to monitor or oversee its operations thus disabling themselves from being informed of risks or problems requiring their attention.”[15] Additionally, publicly traded corporations owe a duty to disclose. A failure to disclose a data breach can result in liability under regulatory and common law.[16] However, this standard does not apply to data breach cases. Equifax did not actively mislead anyone; thus, its level of intent is an unlikely basis for criminal prosecution. [17] Negligence is only a basis for corporate criminal prosecution in food, drug, and environmental cases.[18]

SEC tells listed firms to comply with data privacy rules

Oct

THE country's corporate regulator has ordered capital markets, listed companies, and other institutions to comply with data privacy laws following reports of security breaches in both local and international firms in the previous months.

The Securities and Exchange Commission's (SEC) Markets and Securities Regulation Department said in an e-mailed statement that it has required the Philippine Stock Exchange (PSE), the Philippine Dealing & Exchange Corp. (PDEX), listed firms, and other market institutions to submit compliance reports within 30 days.

The commission noted that aside from the Data Privacy Act (DPA) of 2012 and the European Union General Data Protection Regulation (EU GDPR), these institutions must also follow the 2015 Securities Regulation Code (SRC), which mandates that market participants should have a comprehensive information technology plan.

MANILA, Philippines – Allegations of a so-called “Comeleak” have basis, and Commission on Elections Chairman Andres Bautista will face criminal charges for the hacking of the Comelec’s voter database last March, weeks before the national elections.

In a ruling signed last Dec. 28, the National Privacy Commission (NPC) found the Comelec negligent in ensuring the privacy of its database, thus violating Republic Act 10173 or the Data Privacy Act of 2012.

The NPC recommended the criminal prosecution of Bautista for the data breach between March 20 and 27 last year.

Home plus, a discount store chain, sold the personal information of some 24 million clients to insurance firms in return for more than 23 billion won ($20 million), according to the Government Combined Investigation Unit on Personal Information Crime, Sunday.

The retail company's lottery events were actually aimed at collecting customer data, which was then sent to the insurance firms without their consent.

The unit, which includes the prosecution, indicted six former and incumbent Home plus executives, including current CEO Do Sung-hwan, without physical detention, on charges of violating the law on personal information protection.

Two officials at two of the insurance firms were also indicted on the same charges.

Company to Offer Free Identity Theft Protection and Credit File Monitoring to All U.S. Consumers

ATLANTA, Sept. 7, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- Equifax Inc. (NYSE: EFX) today announced a cybersecurity incident potentially impacting approximately 143 million U.S. consumers. Criminals exploited a U.S. website application vulnerability to gain access to certain files. Based on the company's investigation, the unauthorized access occurred from mid-May through July 2017. The company has found no evidence of unauthorized activity on Equifax's core consumer or commercial credit reporting databases.

The information accessed primarily includes names, Social Security numbers, birth dates, addresses and, in some instances, driver's license numbers. In addition, credit card numbers for approximately 209,000 U.S. consumers, and certain dispute documents with personal identifying information for approximately 182,000 U.S. consumers, were accessed. As part of its investigation of this application vulnerability, Equifax also identified unauthorized access to limited personal information for certain UK and Canadian residents. Equifax will work with UK and Canadian regulators to determine appropriate next steps. The company has found no evidence that personal information of consumers in any other country has been impacted.
